Hi Dan,
Thanks much (and I will take your words to heart I'm sure) but one little thing I know you meant to include: your training video, which I'm sure you must have meant to include.

Oh and Dan, do try to lighten up Dude. Tis the season to be jolly. Meanwhile do try to understand that I don't give serious responses to concocted and contrived nonissues (as so aptly explained by Dustin).

Happy HoHo,
Bob

Bob,

When I was in junior high school, your brand of rambling, sarcastic "underground newspaper" rhetoric was popular; use of a little vulgarity, using sarcastic and inflammatory rhetoric, making fun of authority, and harshly criticizing everyone and everything that tried to limit your behavior. As I matured, I came to understand the reason controls were necessary if we wanted to live in an orderly society.

You can be the disruptive classroom clown if you choose or even the class bully if you choose, but do not expect to be trusted with responsibility if you refuse to behave in accordance with the rules or continue to be disrespectful to others or demonstrate a disregard for their concerns.

Do you think that displaying a lack of maturity and a lack of veracity should encourage anyone to trust you to follow through on a commitment to a project that is so important to so many people in our community and that can have such a large impact on their finances?

Our Club's board is not in the extortion business nor are we in the confidence racket.

The tactics your group employs are akin to those employed by organized crime; strategically plotting how best to apply force and threats to bully others into acquiescing to your demands or trying to fleece others with lies and distractions. The members of any criminal group always manage to justify their activity in their own small and petty minds. These types are always willing to ratchet the violence up a notch to win.

You can continue your secret meetings, hiding your true motives, trashing those you want to control, lying, misrepresenting the motives of others, trying to prevent those with whom you disagree from having a voice, and pushing your own agenda, whatever that may be. However, that behavior does not instill confidence in most people that you actually represent the best interests of our Club or its members.

The goals of the majority, if lawful, must be allowed to prevail.

Best regards,

Dan'l

Oh Golly. I see it all now. What you mean. The money, the Board, the little player symbols, the go to jail card. Yes, I see it there all neatly composed in the secret 2012 Special Edition box of Admirals Cove Monopoly. The coveted Boardwalk to the Pool and the Pool Park Place properties, each with little a red plastic hotel.

And now you want the box with all that money in it. Damn! I knew it would come to this. Okay. Okay. Have it your way.

Tomorrow, 11 December 2012, precisely at 2200 hours you will come to the door and knock 3 times. You will leave your car running. Someone in a Donald Duck tuxedo will open the darkened door. Four slathering canines will be held at bay as long as humanly possible. The Duck will pass you the box wrapped in plain brown paper packaging. You will depart immediately and not look back. You will have precisely 44 seconds to complete your mission, should you accept it.

This email will self-destruct in exactly 10 seconds.

Dustin, Gwyn and Bob:

At the request of the Board of Directors of Admirals Cove Beach Club on December 8, 2012, I am reminding you that effective October 1, 2012 the Fundraising Committee was disbanded as were all existing committees according to our bylaws. An official effort will need to be reestablished in the coming year.

You gave fundraising amounts to the press that misrepresented current pledges and/or cash donated or pledged to date. This is an issue we continue to address with members of the community wanting to know where the money is! Apparently they do believe what is written in the newspaper.

There is a pledge form available online for use in making pledges. Please do not use information regarding pledges that have not been pledged using that form either to the press or to the public.

Gwyn's petition circulated to some Admirals Cove residents indicated that donations should be sent to Bob Wilbur's home address. Soliciting money for an organization and requesting that it be sent to an address other than the organization's address constitutes fraud. This issue will be addressed in our January newsletter.

Please refrain from soliciting additional pledges or cash donations unless you use the authorized pledge form. All personal donor information must be mailed to ACBC, PO Box 366, Coupeville, WA.
